

Engaging Vulnerable Populations for Local and Regional CTR Plan Updates

Guidance:

For local and regional commute trip reduction (CTR) plan updates, your outreach to people in vulnerable populations may focus on people only at CTR-affected worksites and/or in the broader community. The choice is yours.

Reminders

- You are required to engage people in vulnerable populations during your CTR plan update. The previously published guidance is unchanged in this regard.
- When you conduct outreach to people in vulnerable populations, please share what you learn with other CTR practitioners and planners.
- You must also consider your agency and region planning requirements, which might be more stringent.
- Keep Americans with Disabilities Act requirements in mind as you develop your workplans. Consider contacting colleagues in your planning department for support as jurisdictions take different approaches to these requirements.

State outreach to people in vulnerable populations

The state; as part of our Public Transportation Plan Update, State Commute Trip Reduction Plan Update, and CTR equity study; will conduct outreach to people in vulnerable populations about transportation demand management and commute trip reduction. Results of this outreach, as well as input from local and regional CTR plans, will influence these plans and research report.
